Risk Indicator (Source : Fund Admin)

Lower Risk

Higher Risk

The SRI represents the risk and return profile as presented in the Key Information Document (KID). The lowest category does not imply that there is no risk. The SRI is not guaranteed and may change over time. The risk indicator assumes you keep the product for 4 years. The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movement in the markets or because we are not able to pay you.

Any losses or gains do not take into consideration any costs, commissions and fees incurred by the investor in the issue and buyout of the shares (e.g. taxes, brokerage fees or other commissions deducted by the financial intermediary). If performance is calculated in a currency other than the euro, any losses or gains generated can thereby be affected by exchange rate fluctuations (both upward and downward). The discrepancy accounts for the performance difference between the portfolio and the index.

Management commentary

April was dominated by the oil shock in the Middle East, which directly fueled inflation, supply chains, and central bank caution both in the United States and the eurozone. Brent was volatile throughout the month and, as of April 30, had reached four-year highs around US$126 per barrel, due to renewed concerns about the Strait of Hormuz and war-related disruptions to energy flows from the Gulf.

In the United States, the main macroeconomic story was the transmission of rising oil prices to supply-side inflation rather than a new surge in demand. Higher fuel prices are already impacting import costs, consumer inflation expectations, and sector-specific costs such as airline tickets, food products, fertilizers, packaging, and logistics, with Fed officials warning that prolonged energy stress could anchor inflation in goods and services and begin to slow real activity and employment.

In terms of indicators, the US economy grew at an annualized rate of 2% over the first three months of the year, below the 2.2% forecast by economists. Headline inflation, closely monitored by the Federal Reserve, rose to 3.5% in March, its highest level in nearly three years. The S&P Global US Manufacturing PMI was revised up to 54.5 in April (52.3 in March). This indicates the strongest expansion in the manufacturing sector since May 2022. The annual core inflation rate, which excludes food and energy, rose to 2.6% in March (2.5% in the previous two months). However, the earnings season was strong with robust profit growth and significant investments in technology.

In the eurozone, growth slowed to a quarterly rate of 0.1% over the first three months of the year, while inflation in the currency area rose more than expected to 3% in April. Output in the eurozone declined for the first time in 16 months, with the eurozone flash composite PMI at 48.6 in April (50.7 in March) and the flash manufacturing output index at 52.2 (52.0 in March). Consensus expectations for headline inflation, as measured by the Harmonised Index of Consumer Prices (HICP), are 2.7% for 2026, 2.1% for 2027, and 2.0% for 2028.

The ECB and the Bank of England kept their key rates unchanged in April at 2.00% and 3.75% respectively. However, they warned that a rate hike might be necessary in the coming months. The Federal Reserve also kept its rates steady at its April meeting, as Chairman Jerome Powell will end his term on May 15, after which Kevin Warsh is expected to take his place pending Senate confirmation. The market expects the Fed to avoid rate cuts in 2026 and possibly consider a rate hike in the first half of 2027.

During the last week of April, bond markets advanced on both sides of the Atlantic, supported by slowing US growth and the absence of more urgent rate hike signals from the ECB and the Bank of England.

In this context, sovereign yields in Europe remained broadly stable. 10-year rates ended at 3.03% in Germany (+3 basis points), 3.69% in France (-3 bps), 3.49% in Spain (-1 bp), and 3.85% in Italy (-5 bps). A similar trend was observed in 2-year rates, which closed at 2.64% in Germany (+3 bps), 2.79% in France (-3 bps), 2.73% in Spain (0 bps), and 2.83% in Italy (-5 bps). Yields rose in the United States in both the 2-year and 10-year segments, with the 10-year rate ending the month at 4.37% (+5 bps) and the 2-year rate at 3.86% (+8 bps).

This portfolio is managed on an index-linked basis relative to the J.P. Morgan Government Bond Index Global (GBI Global). We minimize the relative sensitivity exposure between the portfolio and its index by investing in a limited number of securities, ensuring minimal risk.
