Market Review Month

The recovery in investor sentiment that started in mid-April extended through May, as moderating oil prices, strong corporate earnings, and a resilient U.S. economy set a constructive tone for financial markets. The U.S.-Iran ceasefire held, and growing prospects for a more durable deal helped calm supply fears, pushing Brent crude down 19% to close the month at $92 a barrel. Yet even as oil prices fell, Treasury yields moved higher, as inflation concerns remained stubbornly persistent. April's headline CPI, released mid-month, surprised meaningfully to the upside at +0.6% month-over-month, with core CPI rising +0.4%, the strength concentrated in core services rather than components more easily dismissed as transitory. The upside surprise validated the hawkish concerns that had surfaced in April's FOMC dissents, and the pivot toward restraint extended even to traditionally dovish members of the Committee. Markets responded by pricing out any remaining Fed rate cuts, and the Treasury yield curve bear-flattened, with 2-year yields rising 11 basis points and 10-year yields rising 5 basis points. Even the Senate's confirmation of Kevin Warsh, whose recent public statements had leaned toward rate cuts in deference to the Trump administration's preferences, proved insufficient to offset the hawkish drift taking hold within the FOMC.

For the month, the US Aggregate Index posted a 0.31% return, as spread sectors broadly outperformed Treasuries, led by investment-grade corporates. A confluence of strong earnings, rallying equity prices, a slower pace of corporate debt issuance, and attractive yields drove IG corporate spreads six basis points tighter, to 72 basis points over Treasuries. Securitized credit sectors also outperformed, though by more modest margins: Agency MBS by 13 basis points, and both CMBS and ABS by eight basis points each. The "plus" sectors posted solid returns across the board, with U.S. high yield and leveraged loans each gaining 0.5%, emerging market sovereign debt returning 0.9%, and EM corporates advancing 0.4%.

Performance Review

The Amundi Funds Pioneer Strategic Income Fund topped the Bloomberg U.S. Universal Index for the month.

Month

Contributors

Security selection within Industrials was beneficial, particularly our select issuer exposure within the Technology and Gaming industries.

Our 11% overweight to Financials contributed as the sector outpaced duration-adjusted Treasuries during the month.

Detractors

Although there were no material sector detractors, on a portfolio level our high yield credit hedge detracted from relative returns in a broadly risk-on environment across spread sectors.

Our yield curve steepening bias was modest laggard to relative performance.

Outlook

Against the current macro backdrop, we have grown incrementally more constructive on the U.S. economic outlook. The economy's demonstrated resilience, further reinforced by May's decline in oil prices, has reduced the downside risks we had been monitoring. On balance, we now assign a higher probability to our base case: trend-like growth of approximately 2% and the Federal Reserve on hold through year-end. Treasury yields, both real and nominal, remain compelling relative to the growth environment, and we are actively managing portfolio duration in response to shifting valuations across the yield curve. Credit spreads continue to demonstrate resiliency, holding firm despite the near-term rate volatility and the energy shock headwind. Broadly, our portfolio positioning is oriented toward generating durable income through disciplined security selection, deliberately favoring higher-quality, shorter-duration bonds relative to our long-term strategic targets while preserving sufficient liquidity to capitalize on opportunities should volatility resurface. In the securitized space, the Agency MBS sector is supported by valuations which remain toward the tight end of their 5- and 10-year ranges, but benefit fundamentally by having less geopolitical and supply-chain risk versus the corporate credit universe. Our security selection focus is on specified pools backed by higher coupon mortgages, and we continue to stay active. Meanwhile, securitized credit fundamentals are broadly acceptable, though outcomes remain highly sector- and security-dependent. With valuations only fair, we are not inclined to add exposure unless risk-adjusted compensation becomes materially more attractive.
